History of Frome Market

The town of Frome was first recorded as being a “Market Town” within the Domesday Book in 1086. A Royal Charter to hold a market was subsequently granted by Henry III in 1239, with the market day changing from Saturday to Wednesday in 1494. Selling by auction increased in popularity during the 18th and 19th centuries, and by 1875 the market had moved closer to railway sidings to accommodate the increase in animal movement by train. The latest move, to its current purpose built site at Standerwick, took place in 1990.
